DETAILED ACTION

The final rejection dated May 3, 2002 has been withdrawn and a new final rejection incorporating the English translation of Japanese patent 57104650 is provided.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 5 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the English translation of Japanese patent 57-104650 .

The English translation of JP'650 discloses steels with a two-phase microstructure of 70 to 90% ferrite and 10 to 30% martensite processed in substantially the same manner as claimed by applicant. See examples 4 to 8 in Table 2 on page 17, and page 15 wherein examples are processed by hot rolling with a finishing temperature of 825C (T2) followed by cooling at 20C/sec (C1) to 600C(T3) to produce a microstructure of ferrite and untransformed austenite, and then subjected to faster cooling at 60C/sec (C2) to a coiling temperature (T4) to convert untransformed austenite into martensite.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed November 18, 2002 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

It was argued the JP'650 teaches cooling to a specific temperature in the first slow cooling step whereas the present invention clearly prescribes that a particular parameter of the microstructure (ferrite content) must have reached a certain value in the first cooling stage before the second cooling step is initiated. Applicant submitted that the cited prior art abstract never mentions that a specific ferrite content must be present before the second cooling step is initiated. It is the examiner's position that in view of the English translation of JP'650, the ferrite content is shown to be present after the first cooling step, see page 13 which discloses that the first cooling (C1) at 5 to 30C/sec to T3 provides a structure of ferrite and austenite and on the second cooling (C2) between T3 and T4 the austenite converts to martensite.

It was submitted that JP'650 discloses a method for a specific steel composition yet the present invention is a generic method. It is the examiner's position that JP'650 meets the recited steps and therefore would be within applicant's generic method claim. Moreover, it is well known in the art that alloying constituents greatly influence the steel microstructure and although present invention does not recite compositional limitation, such would still be an important factor and consideration in obtaining a dual phase microstructure.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within

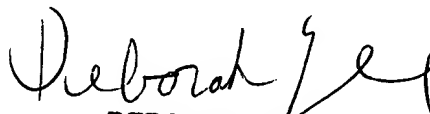

TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
